

Cody is worried about his missing father but cannot get his mother to do anything.

Mom: Hey, sweetie. I thought you were going to your father's after school today?

Cody: Mom, I can't find Dad anywhere. I've been calling him all day, but he won't answer.

Mom: Don't get all excited. I'm sure he's around somewhere.

Cody: But you know he was supposed to pick me up after soccer today. He even left a voice mail to remind me.

Mom: Of course he did.

Cody: Stop it, Mom! He never showed up. That's why I came here. He hasn't called and he's not not answering his cell phone. I think you should call the police.

Mom: I will not. I'm sure there's an explanation. And besides, he may be your father, but he's no longer my husband. I'm not responsible for his whereabouts.

Cody: Great, Mom. When it turns out something has happened to him, I'll remind you that you said that.
